A COUNCIL RESOLUTION CONCERNING

National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day – December 21, 2012

FOR the purpose of declaring December 21, 2012 as National Homeless Persons' Memorial Day in Baltimore City to bring attention to the struggle of people experiencing homelessness, to mourn the passing of our neighbors who, in life, lacked stable housing, and to rededicate ourselves to ending the conditions that create and maintain homelessness.

Recitals

Each year since 1990, communities across the country have come together on or near the first day of winter and the longest night of the year 'to bring attention to the tragedy of homelessness and to remember our homeless friends who have paid the ultimate price for our nation's failure to end homelessness.' Baltimore City joins the National Coalition for the Homeless, the National Health Care for the Homeless Council, the National Consumer Advisory Board, local homeless service providers, and people throughout the country in recognition of Homelessness Persons' Memorial Day. The statistics speak to the large and growing problem both nationally and in Baltimore City:

- Nationally, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's last, official "homeless count", nearly 700,000 people find themselves in shelters, on the streets, or in other places unfit for human habitation on any given night in the United States - a number that does not include the many who are unstably "doubled up" with family and friends. Over the course of the year, the National Law Center on Homelessness and Poverty estimates that more than 3 million people experience homelessness - including 1.3 million children.
- In Baltimore City, according to Counting Matters: Baltimore City Homeless Point-in-Time Homeless Census Report 2011 produced by Morgan State University for the Mayor's Office of Human Services, at least 4,088 people experience homelessness on any given night - almost half (43.9%) of whom were unsheltered on the night of the census (January 25, 2011).
- The report notes a troubling trend – the increased number of people experiencing homelessness - from 2,681 in 2005 to 4,088 in 2011. Moreover, the report documents an increase in the rate of homelessness since adoption of the City's 10-Year Plan to End Homelessness: from 2007-2009, documented homelessness increased by 13.9% (from 3,002 to 3,419); from 2009-2011, documented homelessness increased by 19.6%.

- 1 • The report found that families with children comprised nearly half (44%) of the sheltered
2 population of people experiencing homelessness. A substantial percentage of the children
3 (76.9%) identified in the census were ten years old and younger. A parallel count of 4 homeless youths, conducted by the Center for Adolescent Health at the Johns Hopkins
5 Bloomberg School of Public Health, documented 640 unaccompanied homeless youth 6 (between the ages of 13-25) - a more than 50% increase since 2009, when 426 youth were 7 identified.
- 8 • Counting Matters documented a slight increase of the number of veterans since 2009; an 9 increase of 26 sheltered and 6 unsheltered veterans were counted in 2011 - this despite 10 renewed commitments and laudable efforts by the VA and others to end veteran 11 homelessness. As the wars draw to an end, the shame of veteran homelessness will likely 12 rise without additional resources for housing and services.
- 13 • According to Counting Matters, the three top health concerns that impact the homeless
14 population in the City of Baltimore are substance abuse, mental health, and chronic 15 illness. A 2005 study by the National Health Care for the Homeless Council found that 16 this “tri-morbidity” of substance abuse and mental illness together with chronic health 17 problems increases the risk of early death. Indeed, people experiencing homelessness are 18 3-4 times more likely to die prematurely than their housed counterparts and have an 19 average life expectancy of between 42 and 52 years old.
- 20 • While federal health reform offers an opportunity to increase substantially health 21 insurance coverage for this vulnerable population - an opportunity that will be fully 22 seized only if we ensure robust outreach, enrollment, and access to quality care - the most 23 critical health condition faced by this population - namely, homelessness itself - can be 24 addressed only by increasing the availability of affordable housing.

25 Although some of the increases found in local homeless censuses can be explained by 26 improved survey efforts, it is clear that homelessness in Baltimore is on the rise as we approach 27 the halfway point of the City’s 10-Year Plan to End Homelessness. We need to recommit to 28 achieving the central goals of the 10-Year Plan: ensuring access to affordable housing, 29 comprehensive health care and supportive services, and livable incomes.

30 NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE, That the 31 Council hereby declares December 21, 2012 as National Homeless Persons’ Memorial Day in 32 Baltimore City to bring attention to the struggle of people experiencing homelessness, to mourn 33 the passing of our neighbors who, in life, lacked stable housing, and to rededicate ourselves to 34 ending the conditions that create and maintain homelessness - fundamentally, poverty and the 35 lack of affordable housing.

36 AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this Resolution be sent to the Mayor, the 37 President & CEO of Health Care for the Homeless, and the Mayor's Legislative Liaison to the 38 City Council.
