Recitals

Whereas, a state of emergency and catastrophic health emergency was proclaimed within the State of Maryland on March 5, 2020, and renewed on March 17, April 10, May 6, June 3, July 1, July 31, August 10, September 8, October 6, October 29, and November 25, 2020 to control and prevent the spread of COVID-19 within the state, and the state of emergency and catastrophic health emergency still exists;

Whereas, on March 19, 2020, Mayor Bernard "Jack" C. Young of Baltimore City declared a local state of emergency for Baltimore City due to the spread of COVID-19, which is still in place;

Whereas, on December 9, 2020, to reduce the spread of COVID-19 and to protect the public health, Mayor Brandon M. Scott issued an Executive Order restricting gatherings and indoor and outdoor dining, which among other things, prohibited on-premises consumption of food or drink, leaving food service establishments reliant on takeout and delivery to stay open;

Whereas, restaurants, bars, breweries, and similar establishments are at the heart of Baltimore's economy, and among the hardest hit, and most impacted by the COVID-19 crisis;

Whereas, with orders to limit seating capacity, many food service establishments have experienced an increase in takeout and delivery offerings, placing a sudden and severe financial strain on the industry, particularly on restaurants that are small businesses, a category of businesses which typically already operate on thin margins;

Whereas, many of these food service establishments continue to operate by selling food and beverage through takeout and delivery, as a primary source of income during this crisis, particularly those that are small businesses that already operate on thin margins, adding to financial pressures in an industry that predate the COVID-19 crisis;

Whereas, based on public input received by City officials, and surveys conducted by City staff, the Baltimore Development Corporation, and the Downtown Partnership, many food service establishments within the City have been relying on delivery and takeout service to generate revenue, and it is critical they operate in a safe manner where social distancing can be maintained in accordance with guidance from State and City public health officials;

Whereas, it is in the public interest to ensure the delivery of essential food and services to the residents of Baltimore City and to maximize food service establishment revenue from the takeout and delivery orders that are currently the sole source of revenue for those small businesses to enable restaurants, bars, breweries, and similar facilities to survive this crisis and remain as sources of employment and community vitality in the City of Baltimore;

Whereas, many consumers, eager to support local food service establishments, use third-party applications and websites to place orders with food service establishments for delivery and takeout, and these third-party platforms and food delivery service providers charge restaurants fees, with service agreements between some establishments and third-party platforms providing that the platform charge the establishment fees in excess of 30% of the purchase price per order;

Whereas, food service establishments, particularly food service establishments that are small businesses with few locations, have limited bargaining power to negotiate lower commission fees with third-party platforms given the high-market saturation of providers and the dire financial circumstances food service establishments face during the COVID-19 pandemic because takeout and delivery are the sole options available to keep the business in operation;

Whereas, these excessive fees present a substantial hardship during a time of great economic uncertainty for many local small businesses at a time when certain third-party delivery platforms are reaching market valuations of tens of billions of dollars;

Whereas, capping the fees for use of third-party, app-based food delivery platforms to a maximum of 15% of the purchase price on delivery or pick-up orders while food service establishments are unable to provide unrestricted dine-in service will accomplish the fundamental government purpose of easing the financial burden on struggling establishments during this public health emergency while not unduly burdening third-party, app-based delivery platforms as this fee is recognized as reasonable, and third-party platforms continue to earn significant revenue; the 15% cap on fees charged to food service establishments is based on the findings and experience of other cities and counties across the country that have already adopted such fee ceilings as reasonable emergency regulations on food delivery services;

Whereas, during this time of local economic shutdown and uncertainty caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, many vulnerable workers have found work opportunities as delivery drivers for these third-party delivery platforms to financially support themselves and their families;

Whereas, third-party, app-based delivery platforms will further undermine already vulnerable workers if the companies reduce compensation rates to these delivery drivers as a result of this Ordinance capping delivery commission fees and it is critically important that we protect these workers' wages during this economic downturn;

Whereas, Article II, Section 17 of the City Charter gives the Mayor and City Council the authority to license, tax, and regulate businesses, trades, vocations, or professions, and Article II, Section 47 of the City Charter authorizes the Mayor and City Council to pass any ordinance as it may deem proper in maintaining the peace, good government, health and welfare of Baltimore City;

Whereas, the City Council finds and declares that the passage of this Ordinance is necessary for the protection of the public health and welfare.

Section 1. Be it ordained by the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, That the Laws of Baltimore City read as follows:
